4K - What's the big deal?

Sure the resolution and quality is better as you are capturing more data in every frame. But the real benefit of 4K is revealed post capture. With four times the resolution of High definition (1080p) you have an amazing source of content available, allowing you to zoom in cleanly, cut to closeups and eliminate jump cuts from your finished product without losing image quality. Stay classy. Shoot in 4K.

FULL FRAME

What is it and why is it good for video?

With a sensor the size of the frame of 35mm film, the neat answer is that full frame has a greater area available to capture light. The real benefits for videographers are around enhanced low light performance, lower noise and more control over depth of field, milking the most out of the lens and creating a smoother flow of crisper clearer images.

LENSES

WHY CINE LENSES?

Transitions are important when moving between scenes. The iris on a cine lens allows the ability to gradually control exposure or depth of field when moving the camera from a bright exterior to a dark interior. Smooth and silent operation is even more important with cine lenses particularly when changing focus or when a captured object is moving and needs to be in sharp focus during the whole scene. Focus works slightly differently with cine lenses and typically barrel rotations are longer, which allows for more precise focus, along with hard stops as opposed very short focus throws on photo lenses. Each cine lens has accurate and calibrated distance markings and is optically optimised and built to last and withstand the rigours of use on any video or cinema production set.

AUDIO SOLUTIONS

An investment in an appropriate audio solution will be the most noticeable improvement in your output that money can buy. Typically audio solutions fit into two areas – on camera solutions and on subject solutions. Pop in and talk through the variety of options available with our experts. We can customise a solution to suit the distances and how targeted you need to be on the noise source, and whether you are shooting inside or outside. Check ambient noise sources and scope the location prior to commencing recording as elements like wind and air-conditioners can ruin a perfect clip.

STABILISATION

STAY STABLE

A stable shooting platform is much more important and harder to achieve when shooting video than still images. Stills require stability for fraction of second, and can utilize very fast shutter speed to minimize the risk; quality video requires both slow shutter and long running stabilisation. A single shake can ruin a whole video clip, so, stay stable and talk through your specific requirements with one of our in store experts.

GET MOBILE

Let's face it, our phones are with us a lot, charged up and ready to go, portable and accessible. There are a lot of reasons to use them to capture video. But they do have some limitations. Camera house have all the greatest ideas to optimise your video output when using your phone. Lighting and audio solutions, stability and lens additions can all add massive dimension to your output. But the sneakiest and simplest tip we have to offer is don't shoot your video vertically ..turn your phone on its side and enjoy the widescreen world.

STUDIO SET UP

A common setup for lights is called 3 point lighting. This configuration consists of a key light, a fill light, and a back light. The key light should be the brightest of the three and provides the bulk of light to your subject. The fill light eliminates shadows caused by the key light. Your fill should be less intense than your key. The back light separates your subject from the background, creating depth and also preventing a flat looking shot.
